scene deputy. The computer's questions will ask Deputy to determine what area of the body needs help, or what the medical issue is, and then it will instruct the deputy on how to use the supplies to treat the person. This technology and equipment will supplement the Automated External Defibrillator (AED's) currently issued to every marked patrol car.

"Often our deputies arrive on the scene first and I'm excited to add this capability to help them render first-aid and save lives," said Sheriff Rick Staly. "This capability will enhance emergency medical response, especially in western Flagler County."

Flagler deputies are already trained in first-aid and CPR. These units cost $2,100.00 each.
